PICKENS, S. C.:

THURSDAY, MAY 30 1907.

Don't cuss the editor, or the paper. You don't have to take it and read it—you can pay up and quit.

According to the Philadelphia Inquirer, no state with an ambitious millionaire really lacks senatorial timber.

A sensible councilman in Atlanta wants painting eliminated from the curriculum. He is right. Too many frills have been introduced into the public school system, leading to a frightful waste of valuable time. After painting would doubtless come sculpturing and architecture—a miserable smattering in each instance.

Tonsorial artists, says the News and Courier, are said to be astounded by the announcement of a London scientist that he has effected a paste that will clean away the beard without the use of a razor. But the story sounds very much like some kind of a skin game.

The Indianapolis News thinks that "no free people ought ever to get into the habit of thinking of any one man, no matter how good and great, as indispensable." Right. If they do the lone man will soon be characterizing the people as "undesirable."

Watered Stock.

The Calvert correspondent of the Sylvan Valley News says:

"The greatest cow in Dixie is owned by Mr. Lewis. He says he sold 700 gallons of skimmed milk in five months, besides 100 pounds of butter. The Captain has turned the 'card' over to Mr. Lewis."

Evidently plenty of salt and water in that country, as well as "moonshine."

The traveling revivalist in Georgia who lashed his 12-year-old son nearly to death, because the little fellow played base-ball Sunday, probably thinks that he has inculcated in his offspring the Christian idea of kindness and forbearance. Six months of hard labor on the rock-pile may clear up the befogged brain of the fanatic who has been living off his own pious shoutings and the collection of his congregations.

We don't have to write a smart article and flood the country with sample copies to call the attention of people to the merits of the SENTINEL-JOURNAL. There is not a week passes but what new subscribers voluntarily come into the office and give us their names, and every now and then one comes along and—quits. We appreciate the support and patronage given us and we find no fault with the quitter. If he doesn't want the paper we don't get mad.

We are running this paper as a business, and we give you as much for your dollar as you will get anywhere. The merchant has his goods to sell. Our reading matter and our advertising space is our stock in trade. We offer the public an attractive piece of goods and it is left with them to buy or not, as they see their needs, and we do not fall out with them if they do not buy of us.

Perverts Nature.

The Westminster correspondent of the Keowee Courier says:

"D. C. Ward, who died on May 13, had eight children."

No wonder he died.

Not All Did.

"When we see so many young men with their hair parted in the middle and hanging down over their foreheads so as to obscure every trace of intellect, and so many young women with their hair all frizzly-frowsly and flopping around over their pretty faces in fifty different directions, we are not surprised that the followers of Darwin are now positively sure that mankind descended from the monkey." —[Leesburg News.

"Oh, don't be so hard on them. Most of them are young and inexperienced. Soon the frizzly-frowsly woman will become the wife of the dudish fellow, and then the frizzles will come out of her hair while his hair will come out by the roots. Just wait." —[Bucksburg Chronicle.

Some few folks in the country yet, who trace their paternal origin from Adam and Eve, even if they do not "ape" their ancestors in their manner of living, dress, etc. One thing they are adepts in, that is in "disobeying" the laws of God, man and nature.

The work done on Main street has had several hard rains on it, but it is standing up well. It is a pity that the town council did not have the money to make a clean sweep of Main street, from one end to the other, cut down the knolls and drag the dirt into the swags and low places, take up the trees from out of the street and sidewalk and put the walk and street in good condition. It would take probably $200, and we believe this amount could be raised by popular subscription, one gentleman already signifying his willingness to contribute $10 to this fund. The work already done is favorably commented on by both citizens and visitors alike. Let the good work go on as soon as possible.

Somewhat Inexpedient.

The Charleston News and Courier says:

"It is hoped that as many as possible of the South Carolina editors, who will meet at the Isle of Pains in June, will bring brides."

Most of them have passed the "bride" stage, and as this is not Utah, it will be useless for the News and Courier to hope that its suggestion be acted on. However, for the benefit of Col. Hemphill, we would suggest that the editors carry their wives and a "young" lady friend. This arrangement might be conducive of some of the old bachelor pencil-pushers changing their mode of living.

Went Down

The Calvert correspondent of the Brevard paper gets off the following good one:

"J. W. Brooks, of Cherryfield, has returned home and is visiting Mr. Lewis at Calvert. Lewis says that Brooks is singing 'The Old Home is Not Like It Used to Be.' Mr. Brooks came home with the mumps. Lewis says he doesn't know which direction the mumps went, 'up or down.'"

Judging from the song the mumps must have taken a downward course.

A Terrible Mix-Up.

"A mix-up of horse and buggy, colored nurse as driver and woman with a baby in her arms, and the female portion of two Chapman families, occurred in front of the J. W. Chapman residence on North Caldwell street Monday. What we have heard about it leaves so much uncertainty in our mind that we leave our readers to learn particulars from first hands. No one was hurt, yet the baby and its mother escaped almost by a miracle."

The above is from the Sylvan Valley News, of Brevard, N. C., and is a right smart of a mix-up, in fact it reads as if the editor had got "mixed up" somewhat himself, but whether with the "horse and buggy," "colored nurse," "woman with a baby in her arms," or "the female portion of two Chapman families," we are unable to say. Anyhow, we leave our readers to separate or unravel the mix-up as best they can and get what information they can from the mixed-up story.

"Du Tell."

There is some talk of establishing a Kaeley liquor cure establishment at Sassafras Gap. We hope it will go through, as we understand the location and surroundings are very conducive to the success of such an enterprise and that it will have the moral support of several of our prominent citizens. —[Brevard (N. C.) News.

Old Soldiers' Day.

The ladies of Pickens Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, are doing all in their power to make next Saturday, the 1st of June, one of the biggest days yet had in the interest of the surviving Confederate Soldiers, and, to this end, all soldiers of the Confederacy are especially invited to come and partake of the hospitality of Pickens on that day. The people of Pickens are looking forward to this day as one of the pleasures of the year, when old comrades can come together on common ground, and feel that they have at least won a victory in which the people rejoice with them. It is always a pleasant time not only for the veterans but for their descendants, for the spirit that animated the soldiers of the '61 to '65 still lives in the hearts of the children of those soldiers of the greatest war on record.

This will be an occasion of rejoicing—not a revival of old bitter feeling—but a day of exultation and thanksgiving, as it were, for the blessings that have attended men whose patriotism has been severely tried, and who have found for themselves, and to hand down to their children, the priceless heritage of victory over self, though their ultimate success at arms was not rewarded with the ultimate victory in war.

They did succeed, and their success is written in the present prosperity and realized hope of their country. No pen can adequately describe the real grandeur of the Confederate soldier, because no words can express the sacrifice and manhood displayed through those days of trial and peril.

But the ladies are faithful in their efforts to express their appreciation and to teach the young generation the truth that impelled the soldiers of the civil war; and no better plan to do this has been devised than to openly show their faith and love for men who gave all without promise or hope of reward, other than self-won honor of doing their whole duty.

Let everybody come out Saturday and the ladies and all the people of Pickens will help to make all have the best time possible.

Those who bring baskets will carry them to the vacant lot in front of the Methodist church where they will be cared for until ready to be spread.

There will be music and speech appropriate to the occasion, and everybody is expected to be at home in Pickens on that day and everybody is expected to feel at home in Pickens on that day, and everybody is expected.
